LEM

What to Expect

What to expect in the next few weeks...

1

Introduction to Core AEM Principles. Learn essential authoring functions through self-paced training materials and collaborative office hours.

2

Learn the OC Design System. We'll partner with the Web UX Design team to explore templates, components, and styling policies that shape the authoring experience.

3

Lead as platform champions. Together we will experience real-time platform bugs & fixes, gain collective learnings, and become experts driving success in this new business platform.

LEM Platform Overview

Platform Overview

Let's go over some of the main differences between the way things were done on Inkwell and the new processes and features we'll be using in LEM.

Inkwell vs. LEM

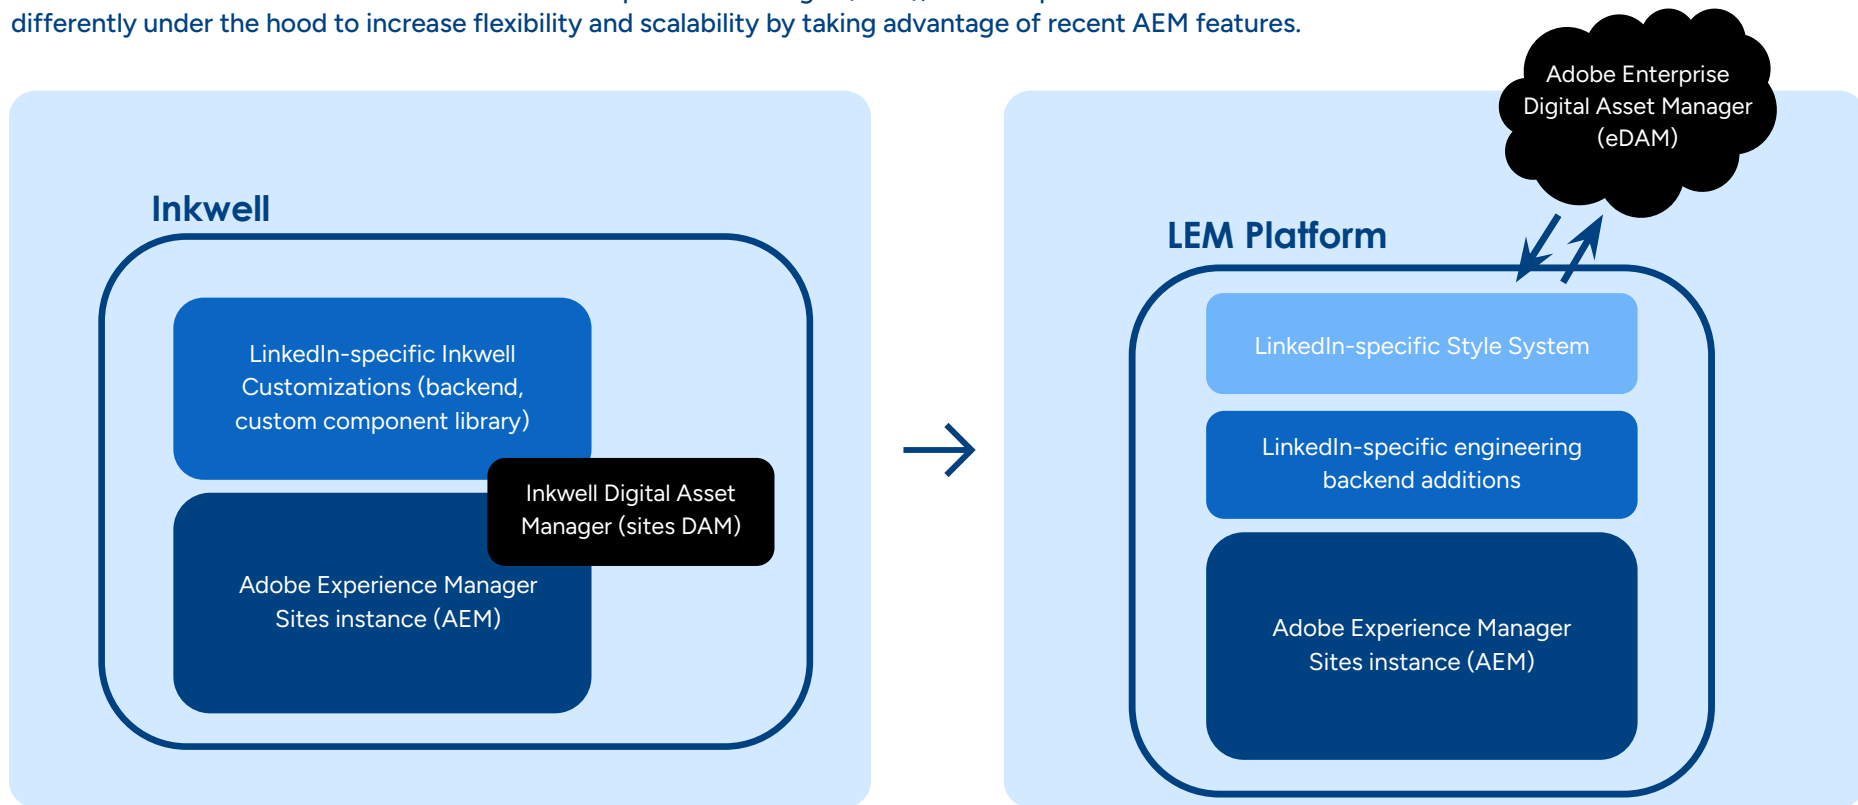

Keyword Cheat-sheet

NEW: Editable Templates

NEW: Multi-site Management

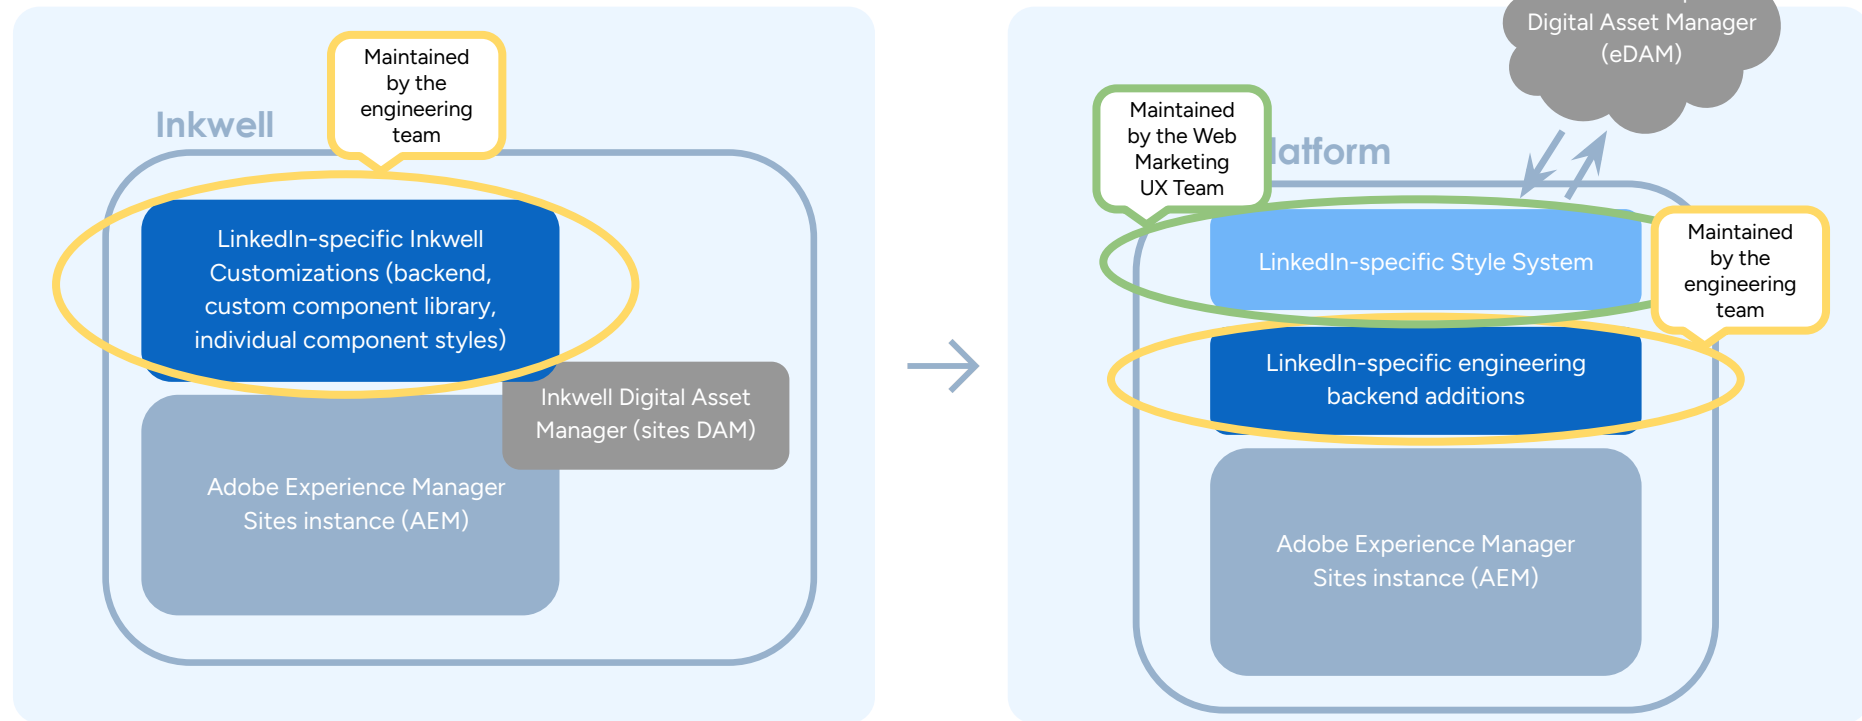

Inkwell vs. LEM

While both Inkwell and LEM are based on Adobe Experience Manager (AEM), the LEM platform is structured differently under the hood to increase flexibility and scalability by taking advantage of recent AEM features.

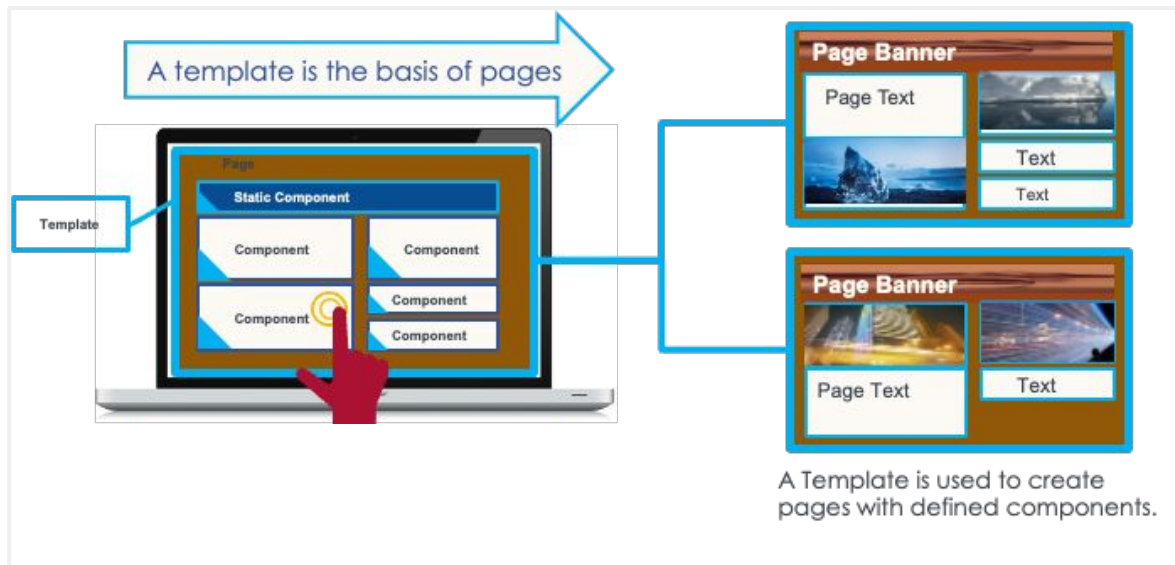

Inkwell vs. LEM

While both Inkwell and LEM are based on Adobe Experience Manager (AEM), the LEM platform is structured differently under the hood to increase flexibility and scalability by taking advantage of recent AEM features.

LEM Authoring Keyword Cheat-sheet

- style system - properties we add on top of the components & templates to determine the look and feel of the page
 - These properties are how we apply CSS to different elements on the page
 - The style system is made up of policies
- policy - setting for which CSS styles can be applied to each component/template
 - These are set by template authors to make authoring a page both easy and flexible
- template - a reusable layout of containers and components
 - Content is different for each instance of a template

Inkwell Banner

LEM Banner

Banner (all settings within one custom component, so most changes need to be made by Eng)

Container:
Image
Title(s)
Button

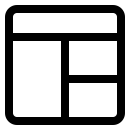

(each piece can be styled and configured individually)

- component - a bite-sized building block of a page
 - In Inkwell, components were generally all-in-one, like with a Banner component that included an icon, headline, subheadline, and button
 - In LEM, often a few smaller components will be combined in a container to create a single module, so the same Banner component would consist of a container holding an Image, Title(s), and Button components - closer to HTML
 - This allows for more flexibility and control over our pages' appearances

New in LEM: Editable Templates

Defined by Template Author

Template 1 (Customer Stories)

Fixed layout, only essential components enabled, pre-set style policies

Customer 1
Customer 2
Customer 3
Customer 4
Customer 5

Content edited by all Authors

For many pages, we want to preserve a set layout and make editing simple for the author.

A Template Author can create Template 1 (e.g. for a Customer Stories page) with this in mind, restricting editability of things like layout and style combinations to keep pages consistent and scalable.

All sites made from this template will look very similar, since only the content is editable.

Template 2 (general content page)

Editable layout, more components enabled, flexible styles

LTS Homepage

LMS Homepage

LSS Homepage

For more complex pages, we may want to allow experienced authors to make more robust changes.

A Template Author can create a separate Template 2 (e.g. a general template for any content page) with fewer restrictions and more customizability.

Sites made from this template can vary within approved parameters.

New in LEM: Multi-Site Management (MSM)

LEM's Multi-Site Management allows for pages to have inheritance structures, making it easier to keep track of page variations, organize regional sites, and roll out changes across sites.

- language master - a base page of content that all regional pages in that language inherit from
 - unpublished, functions as a blueprint
 - one per language (e.g. EN)
 - to publish changes, content updates roll out to all live copies
- live copy - a page that automatically inherits most content from the language master it is based on, but can be customized as needed
 - one per region (e.g. US/EN)
- language copy - a one-time copy of a language master page that does not automatically inherit from the language master
 - can be used to set up a new language master, or for one-off test cases

LEM Author Access

Accessing LEM

1

Create a Jira ticket

- Documentation
- Example Ticket

Add yourself to the correct group (see next slide)

- go/groupID
- Group ID: SG-Okta-cms-linkedinexperiencemanager-prod
- Author training: <https://lem-author.corp.linkedin.com/sites.html/content/lem/training>

2

Login to LEM - Link

- Confirm on the ticket once this step is complete so they can add user to correct groups for read/write access. Wait for a response on the ticket notifying you have been added to the groups.

3

Once authorization has been granted. Ensure you have read/write access to LEM by editing a page and ensuring you can add components to the page. Respond to the ticket letting them know you have correct access.

Adding yourself to the group

Tutorial: Mobile Mockup

You'll notice a few device and UI mockups in this presentation deck. Here's a quick tutorial on how to easily replace media without disrupting the design:

1. Right click on the picture/media you want to replace
2. Click 'Change Picture' in the menu that pops up
3. Select 'From a File', and find the piece of media you want to replace it with (normally on your desktop or in your downloads folder)
4. That's it!
5. Pro tip: When moving or scaling down any device or UI imagery, be sure to select both the device/UI layer AND the photo layer that sits on top of it and group them together first (by right-clicking and selecting 'Group' from the menu that pops up. You can ungroup them after the scaling has been completed.

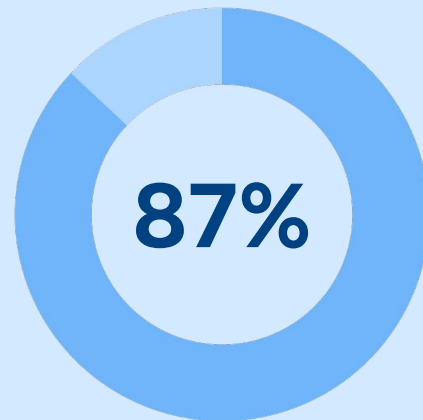

Tutorial:

Chart Data

In order to update these chart graphics, you'll need to go in and edit excel data attached to the graph itself. Here's how to do that:

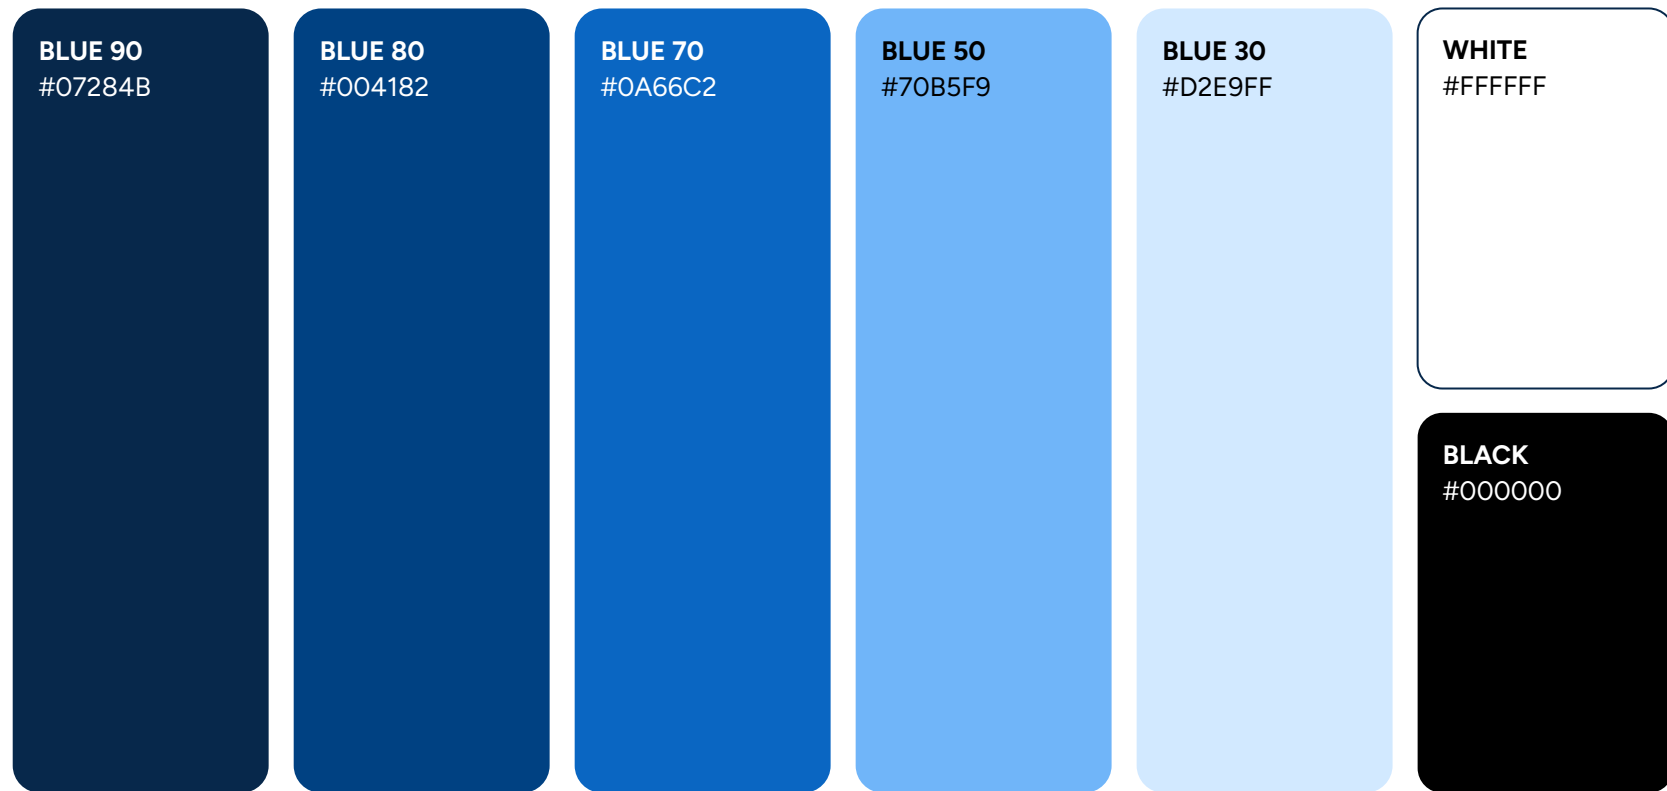

1. Double click on the Circle chart graphic.
2. Under 'Chart Data' in the top menu, click 'Edit Excel Data' (it's got a small green excel icon over a chart)
3. An excel document should pop up with multiple rows in it. In the first row type your main percentage. In the second row type the negative percentage (If your main percentage is 90%, your negative percentage would be 10%)
4. Your data should automatically update!
5. Be sure to update your key data point in the text box overlaid on top of the chart.

87% of marketers say video helps them generate leads.
